DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 5/20/08 has been entered.

Response to Arguments

2. Applicant's arguments filed 5/20/08 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. In response to applicant's argument that Lassen does not teach an interlabial device that is configured such that the entire absorbent interlabial device resides within an interlabial space of a wearer in use, a recitation of the intended use of the claimed invention must result in a structural difference between the claimed invention and the prior art in order to patentably distinguish the claimed invention from the prior art. If the prior art structure is capable of performing the intended use, then it meets the claim. In this case, the labial pad of Lassen is taught as requiring only partial insertion. However, the structure of Lassen does not prevent the entire absorbent interlabial device from being able to be placed inside an interlabial space of a wearer. The interlabial device is capable of fitting within an interlabial region of a user, particularly if the device is folded. Additionally, how the article will fit on a user is relative to the size of the user. As to the claimed dimensions, as previously argued, the fact that Lassen teaches a larger pad that resides outside of the interlabial space is a matter of function rather than structure. The claimed subject matter is relative to the dimensions of the pad. The examiner maintains that Lassen teaches an interlabial device similar to the claimed invention. One having ordinary skill in the art would be able through routine experimentation to determine the appropriate size of the interlabial pad in accordance with the intended use.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 1-5 and 10-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Lassen USPN 4631062.

As to claims 1-4, 10, 11, 13, and 14, Lassen discloses an interlabial absorbent device having a liquid permeable topsheet 80 on a body facing side and a liquid impermeable backsheet 70 on a garment facing side, with an interior region 64 and periphery region (58,60,62), with an absorbent 74 disposed between the garment and body facing sides in a layered arrangement. Lassen does not disclose the specific dimensions of the pad. Lassen does teach the relative dimensions in a functional sense are at least long enough to extend over the desire areas in use (col. 11, lines 28-35).

One would be motivated by the teaching of Lassen to provide a pad with the claimed dimensions for allowing the pad to fit the body contours of a wearer with the need for external attachment to a panty in order to minimize the irritability and friction, which Lassen teaches is desired (col.I 6, lines 9-16). In Gardner v. TEC Systems, Inc., 725 F.2d 1338, 220 USPQ 777 (Fed. Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 830, 225 USPQ 232 (1984), the Federal Circuit held that, “where the only difference between the prior art and the claims was a recitation of relative dimensions of the claimed device and a device having the claimed relative dimensions would not perform differently than the prior art device, the claimed device was not patentably distinct from the prior art device”.

The interlabial device has a concave portion on the garment facing side and a convex portion on the body contacting side, the concave and convex portions are in face-to-face relationship (Figures 2 and 6).

As to claim 5, see Figure 6- the con-shaped convex/concave portions.

As to claim 12, see Figures 2-4.
